Kansas City Ballet, Kansas City Symphony, Lyric Opera of Kansas City and Harriman-Jewell Series Announce Revised 2020-21 Season

No performances through December 31, 2020 by Symphony, Ballet, Opera and Harriman-Jewell Series at the Kauffman Center for the Performing Arts

KANSAS CITY, MO (July 7, 2020) — To address building occupancy restrictions and social distancing guidelines, the Kansas City Ballet, Kansas City Symphony, Lyric Opera of Kansas City, and Harriman-Jewell Series conclude it is not possible to perform and today announce postponement or cancellation of their on-stage programming at the Kauffman Center for the Performing Arts through December 31, 2020.

The decision was made based on current information about the pandemic and its impact, which has stopped all activity at the Kauffman Center since mid-March.

“Collectively, The Kansas City Ballet, Kansas City Symphony, Lyric Opera of Kansas City, and Harriman-Jewell Series have conducted evaluations and extensive scenario planning. It was determined that it was in the best interest of our shared audiences, artists, staff, volunteers, and guests that resources be conserved now to put us in a stronger position to return for a dynamic and robust season next calendar year,” said Kauffman Center President and CEO Paul Schofer. “We each remain committed to our mission to enrich the lives of our communities throughout the region, country and world by offering extraordinary and diverse performing arts experiences. We cannot wait to welcome all of our audiences back to the Kauffman Center.”

Today's announcement includes the following performances that were to take place at the Kauffman Center (in date order). In the coming weeks, each organization will release additional information regarding the possible rescheduling of performances.

Kansas City Ballet Executive Director Jeffrey Bentley stated, “The past few months have been an enormously challenging period for Kansas City Ballet, indeed for all of the performing arts and artists in our nation. We are confident our dancers will soon return to the stage, along with our colleagues here at the Kauffman Center and once again deliver those uniquely personal experiences that each patron carries with them when they leave the theater. It cannot be too soon.” He continued, “While we may not be present at this moment on the stage of the Muriel Kauffman Theatre, stay tuned for future announcements regarding new programming initiatives at the Todd Bolender Center for Dance & Creativity which will be celebrating its 10th anniversary this August!”

With this update, the Kansas City Symphony also is rearranging its season to present Classical, Pops and Family Series concerts beginning in early January through the end of June 2021. This revised schedule will result in some exciting programming changes while ensuring the safety of ticket holders, musicians, and staff.

“We continue to make music, even during these times, through whatever means we can,” said Danny Beckley, Executive Director of the Kansas City Symphony. “The need to perform great music is hardwired into our DNA, and we will not be silenced by this pandemic. We are developing plans for this fall that include chamber music with small ensembles of musicians, with live performances online and outdoors to the maximum extent possible. We are optimistic that society is more successfully dealing with the pandemic six months from now, and so from January to June, we are developing plans to safely present our full subscription series in Helzberg Hall.”

A revised Symphony concert schedule will be announced in the coming weeks. Until then, please stay in touch at kcsymphony.org, and the Kansas City Symphony on Facebook and Instagram for the latest announcements, online performances, podcasts and educational resources.

Lyric Opera of Kansas City General Director and CEO Deborah Sandler stated, “In the face of this uncertain and unpredictable public health epidemic, it will be impossible for LOKC to proceed with our fall programming at the Kauffman Center through the end of December 2020. This unfortunate and heartbreaking decision postpones the spectacular fall season we had planned for Kansas City. Please know that our energies are focused on reimagining a revised and exciting season at our Lyric Opera Production Arts Building. Look for our announcement shortly. We cannot wait to see you again.”

Most Harriman-Jewell Series performances originally planned for the 2020–2021 season will be moved to the 2021–2022 season.

“Even though subscription performances planned for the 56th Season have been recast to our 57th Season, the Harriman-Jewell Series will actively contribute to the Kansas City cultural landscape in the near term,” said Clark Morris, Series Executive and Artistic Director. “Our 2020–2021 season must be reimagined, and we pledge to find substantive ways to serve our community.”

For existing ticket holders of postponed or cancelled events, please note that the organization that issued your tickets will be in contact regarding next steps soon. Subscribers who have renewed their season subscriptions will have an option to receive a credit to a future performance, donate the package value or speak with the organization about other options. All exchange fees will be waived for tickets purchased for these events.

If you are a ticket holder of one of these performances, please contact the organization that issued your tickets:
